FIELD GUIDE

Start with the full decision

A credit pull is one part of a lending decision. This guide helps you understand which report may be reviewed, what to verify with the issuer, and whether a new account fits your budget.

Use this guide in three steps

- Review your current reports and your reason for borrowing.
- Confirm the product, inquiry process, eligibility, and costs with the issuer.
- Record the decision and check the resulting inquiry or new account.

No chart can guarantee which bureau, score model, credit limit, or approval result an issuer will use. Practices can vary by product, location, and application channel.

About the reference charts

The appendix preserves the bank and credit union observations from the supplied guide. Its underlying data is undated and unverified, includes legacy names, and may be outdated. Treat it as historical research material, not a current lender policy list.

FIELD GUIDE

Know what is being checked

Term	What it means
Credit report	The underlying account and payment information held by a reporting company.
Credit score	A number calculated from report data using a particular scoring model.
Hard inquiry	A report review typically connected to an application. It can affect your score.
Soft inquiry	A review such as your own credit check or certain account reviews. It does not affect your score.
Prequalification	An initial eligibility check. Read the disclosure to learn whether it uses a soft inquiry and when a hard inquiry may occur.
CLI	Credit limit increase. Ask whether your specific request requires a hard inquiry.

An issuer may use one report or more than one. Your monitoring score may differ from the score used in its decision.

FIELD GUIDE

Your application readiness check

- I have a clear use for this account and understand the repayment obligation.
- I reviewed each available credit report and investigated unfamiliar entries.
- My application will use accurate identity, income, housing, and employment information.
- I compared the annual fee, interest rate, promotional end date, and transfer or cash-advance fees.
- I checked membership, geography, and other eligibility restrictions.
- I can fit the payment into my monthly cash flow.
- I understand the inquiry disclosure before submitting the application.

If you were recently declined

Read the adverse action notice and address the stated reasons before submitting more applications. A different bureau does not necessarily change the underlying issue.

Borrowing capacity is not the same as spending capacity. Choose the payment you can sustain before choosing the limit you want.

FIELD GUIDE

Ask the issuer before applying

Use the official issuer website or a verified contact number. A representative may not disclose the bureau or scoring model; record an unknown rather than guessing.

Question	Record the answer
Which exact card or product am I discussing?
Is this a prequalification check or a full application?
Will this step create a hard inquiry?
Could more than one bureau be reviewed?
Does a credit limit request have a different process?
What fees, eligibility rules, and repayment terms apply?
Where can I save the written disclosures?

Date checked: _____ Source or representative: _____

WORKSHEET

Compare two options

Complete this before choosing an application. Use the current written terms for each product.

Decision factor	Option A	Option B
Issuer and exact product
Purpose of the account
Annual fee and other fees
APR and promotional end date
Membership or eligibility rules
Inquiry disclosure
Affordable monthly payment
Reason to proceed or wait

Prequalification is not final approval. Recheck the application disclosure at the point where you submit or accept an offer.

APPENDIX NOTES

How to read the historical charts

The state grids record bureau observations attributed by the source guide to MyFICO users. The score-model grids use the shorthand below. Neither chart establishes a current agreement or policy of a bank.

Mark or label	Interpretation in the original guide
EX / EQ / TU	Experian / Equifax / TransUnion
F8 / F9	FICO Score 8 / FICO Score 9 shorthand
Check mark	Reported as a recurring pattern in the original observations; not a guarantee.
Exclamation mark	Reported variation or uncertainty.
Empty cell	No usable observation recorded; not evidence that a bureau will never be used.

Preserved entries may contain ambiguous abbreviations, misspellings, legacy bank names, and incomplete context. Do not infer a state or current issuer from an unclear label. Verify the exact product directly.

Historical appendix follows. Underlying observation dates are not supplied; do not use these charts alone to choose where to apply.

ACTION PLAN

After the application

- Save the decision, application confirmation, and disclosure.
- Check your reports for the issuer name, inquiry date, and any new account.
- If an inquiry is unfamiliar, investigate the company name and the application first. A different reporting name does not necessarily mean fraud.
- If you identify an error or identity theft, use the appropriate reporting company or identity theft process.
- If approved, set payment reminders and review the first statement.
- If declined, use the stated reasons to decide your next action.
